Why translate the Bible in the heart language of minorities?

Many ethnic minorities view the national language of their region as the language of the oppressor and would never come to faith in this language. Bible translation reaches to the heart of an individual and communicates that God speaks their language.

A Muslim woman fluent in her language, as well as Russian and English, wondered which language was her heart language. She was a Christian for many years before the New Testament became available in her native language. When she read a Gospel in her language for the first time she said it was like becoming a Christian all over again. "I now understood things I never understood in Russian or English. This is my heart language." She is now committed to full-time translation of the Old Testament in her language. (Her name and language are intentionally withheld for her protection.)

One Evenki man and his wife (from Siberia) had listened to Russian Christian Radio and purchased a Russian New Testament to learn more about God. They read it many times but simply did not understand the message. Once given a Bible portion in Evenki they read it overnight and claimed the next day, "Now we know that God loves the Evenki and wants us to know Him."

How can you help?

Bible translation is a long, costly process that is severely under-funded. This is why GWN joins with individuals, families, churches, and businesses to provide needed prayer and finances. Please consider a gift to God's Word for the Nations so that Scripture can be available to those who do not have a Bible in their language. 100% of your gift will go directly to a translation project. The GWN board of directors has a personal relationship with every organization we support to more effectively understand and meet specific needs.
