Before you begin this lesson, read “Writing Guidelines” on the previous page.

This exercise is about following directions. Remember when we talked about rules or guidelines? Rules help us communicate better. Directions are a little like rules. Following directions can also help us communicate better. Let’s have some fun following directions.

Read the paragraph below.

A sentence is a statement one person tells another. A question is what one person asks another. They both have to make sense.

Until you are older, there is no such thing as a one-word sentence.

One word is not a sentence. Read that sentence again. One word is not a sentence. Sometimes you have to follow directions even when you do not think you are doing so.

Sometimes two words can make a sentence. Bill ran. That is a sentence. Bill. That is not a sentence. Ran. That is not a sentence. A sentence must have two things: a noun and a verb. You already know this; this is not a grammar lesson. You are following directions, remember?

In our sentence, “Bill ran,” the word Bill is the subject. A subject is a noun — a person, a place, or a thing. Do you know a Bill who is a thing? Most Bills are people. I get and pay the gas bill, but that is something else.

Ran is a verb, a word that shows action. It is what Bill did.

Read this sentence twice. Read this sentence twice. Sometimes there is no way to avoid following directions, is there?

Writing

Write a two-word sentence.

Did you write a two-word sentence? If your two-word sentence starts with Bill and ends with ran, write one using different words. If you did not start with Bill and end with ran, do not write another sentence.

If your two-word sentence starts with a person or a place or a thing and ends with an action word, you might have written a good sentence. Tell your parent that you are at the end of today’s lesson.

Objectives:

- 1 Believe that it is possible to follow directions.
- 2 Understand that it is good to follow directions.
- 3 Understand what makes a sentence.

Note to the parent: For the lessons this year, sit with the student, read the lesson together, and discuss anything that is not clear.

This is an exercise in following directions, remember? Add one word to the two-word sentence that you wrote for lesson one. Your sentence will have three words in it. The third word will explain something to the reader that the reader might want to know: Bill ran home, Dogs chase cats, or Mom burned dinner. There still is a subject and there still is a verb, but there is more information. The third word could be added anywhere in the new sentence that it makes sense.

Write five sentences. Each one should add information to the one that comes before it. If you do not understand how many sentences you are to write, read this paragraph again. The new words can be added anywhere to each previous sentence.

The first sentence should have two words in it. Do not start with Bill.

1. _____ .

HINT! Do exactly as the directions tell you.

The second sentence should have three words in it.

2. _____ .

The third sentence should have four words in it. (Put the new word anywhere.)

3. _____
_____ .

The fourth sentence should have five words in it.

4. _____
_____ .

The fifth sentence should have six words in it.

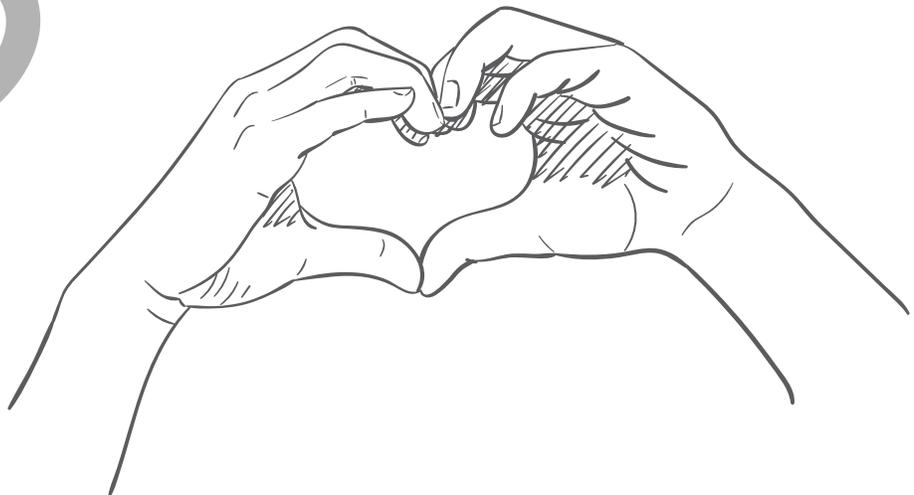

5. _____
_____ .

Now go back and count the number of words in each of your sentences. If you do not have the right number of words in each of your sentences, erase some or add some.

Example:

1. Dogs bark.
2. Dogs bark frantically.
3. Upset dogs bark frantically.
4. Upset, territorial dogs bark frantically.
5. Concerned, upset, territorial dogs bark frantically.

Prewriting

It will make your writing more fun to read if your characters move their bodies when they talk to each other.

For this exercise you will have to watch how the members of your family move when they talk. See if the adults move differently than the kids do. You will find most people move their eyes, hands, feet, and shoulders when they talk.

Just as real people move when they talk together, your characters who are talking should have body movement descriptions along with what they say. It can read like the example below.

To show you how this works, I will put body movement descriptions in bold type. If you ask nicely, your parent may read this to you.

John was getting mad. His voice rose and he waved his hands in the air as he shouted, “I get the catcher’s mitt!”

Bill, looking John in the eyes, said, “I get it today. I asked the coach yesterday.”

“You did not. I was there, and you didn’t say nothin’ about today.”

*John pointed his finger at Bill’s chest and said, “I got the mitt, and I am gonna keep it.” He put it behind his back.

Bill, reaching behind John and trying to grab the mitt, said, “Give it to me.”

As he lifted his lip, John answered, “Try and take it.”

To show you how important it can be to let your reader see your characters move, I wrote this short conversation again and took out the movements. You will recognize that it is harder to “see” the characters when they do not have body language to go with their voices.

John was getting mad. His voice rose as he shouted, “I get the catcher’s mitt!”

Bill said right back at him, “I get it today. I asked the coach yesterday.”

“You did not. I was there, and you didn’t say nothin’ about today. I got the mitt, and I am gonna keep it.”

Bill said, “Give it to me.”

John answered, “Try and take it.”

Objectives:

- 1 Punctuate dialogue.
- 2 Describe characters’ actions.
- 3 Have your characters move as they talk together.

HINT! Separate what a person says from the rest of the sentence with commas.

Now it's your turn. You will decide on two characters for your dialogue and decide what they will talk about.

Step 1: Give your two characters names:

a. _____
_____ Age: _____ Sex: _____

_____ List three words that describe this person:

1. _____ 2. _____
_____ 3. _____

b. _____
_____ Age: _____ Sex: _____

_____ List three words that describe this person:

1. _____ 2. _____
_____ 3. _____

Step 2: Describe what they will talk about:
